attitude should be adopted as it is the attitude which decides the altitude. After these valuable insights, our main guests of honor for the event shared their insights.

Ms. Sonal Madan (Partner of Chadha and Chadha Associates) elaborated on how IPR is integral part of our daily lives, what are the Indian Govt. initiatives in the field of innovation and youth and what are the ways through which IPR can be protected. From Tv series, albums and movies all are given copyright protection and are protected by IPR. There are various govt. schemes like one of them is launching of Start-Ups Intellectual Property Protection (SIPP) in 2016 which have been extended up to March 2023 with certain amendments. Rise of start-ups has led to more IPR registration and so there is a need to protect them.

Prof. (Dr.) Lisa P. Lukose talking about the relevance of this day explained that on 26 April 1970 WIPO Convention came into force and because of that reason this day is celebrated as World Intellectual Property Day. She stressed on the role of the project of Make-in India in the field of IPR, how could it be protected and what is the future outlook. Tapping the creative potential of country's youth to make India a leading knowledge and innovation hub, start-ups are encouraged to file more patents. Govt is providing incentives to star-ups under Start-up India program. She also elaborated about the young youth inventors who introduced new inventions like- KalamSat, Beacon etc.

After the insights of the guests, the program was continued by felicitation of members of Moot court society and organizing committee of Model United Nation. This was followed by the vote of Thanks by Prof. Dr. Rajni Malhotra Dhingra, Principal Department of Law, MAIMS. The event got ended by the Singing of National Anthem.
