Management Aptitude Test and Test Scores

- 1 The Management Aptitude Test (MAT) is designed to measure the aptitude of a candidate for pursuing management education and should be used only for this purpose.
- 2 MAT is administered in five sections-Language Comprehension, Mathematical Skills, Data Analysis & Sufficiency, Intelligence & Critical Reasoning and Indian & Global Environment-each section testing a different ability relevant for management education.
- 3 All MAT administrations necessarily have different questions. Thus one administration may be slightly more difficult or less difficult than another. Scaling has been used to take care of these differences.
- 4 The scaled scores reported are standardised scores for respective sections. These scores are reported on a scale of 0 to 100. Extreme scores (below 15 or above 85) are rare.
- 5 The percentile below column indicates the percentage of candidates in the test who scored below that of the candidate in the section.
- 6 The Composite score is an overall scaled score based on the first four sections of MAT. This is reported on a scale of 199 to 801.
- 7 The percentile below for the Composite Score represents the percentage of candidates whose composite scores are below the candidate's. The composite score has a validity period of one year.
- 8 All scores and percentile below figures are reported after rounding off to the nearest whole number.
- 9 Personal data is as reported by the candidate.

Answers to Frequently Asked Questions

What does the GMAT exam measure?

The GMAT exam measures basic verbal, mathematical, analytical writing, and integrated reasoning skills that you have developed over a long period of time in your education and work. The Integrated Reasoning section requires candidates to interpret and analyze information from different sources and in a variety of formats to solve complex reasoning tasks. The Verbal section measures your ability to understand and evaluate what you read, as well as your ability to recognize basic conventions of standard written English. The Quantitative section tests quantitative reasoning ability. The Analytical Writing Assessment section measures your ability to think critically and communicate complex ideas in writing. Your GMAT scores should not be compared with other test scores. Although the GMAT score scales may resemble those used for other tests, the scores are not directly related.

What doesn't the GMAT exam measure?

It does not measure your knowledge of business, your job skills, or subjective qualities such as motivation, creativity, and interpersonal skills. If a test taker's first language is not English, he or she may still perform well on the exam; however, the GMAT exam may not accurately reflect the abilities of someone who is not proficient in English.

How are the Analytical Writing Assessment scores used?

The Analytical Writing Assessment is used to provide an independent ranking of your ability to think critically and to communicate clearly when writing in English. Writing scores are computed separately from the scores for the multiple-choice sections of the test and have no effect on the Verbal, Quantitative, or Total scores.

What do GMAT scores predict?

GMAT scores are a valid predictor of academic performance in the first year of a graduate management program. Since creating the GMAT exam 50 years ago, we have conducted hundreds of validity studies that demonstrate this fact. In the past ten years, we've conducted almost 300 studies for graduate management programs all over the world. The median correlation between GMAT scores and first-year grades was 0.51 (perfect correlation is 1.0). The median correlation between undergraduate grade point average and first-year grades was 0.28. Thus, GMAT scores are generally a better predictor of performance in the first year of business school than undergraduate grades, though we advise admissions committees to use both when evaluating candidates.

How reliable are GMAT scores?

Test scores actually earned on any given occasion are only an approximation of your true ability. However, our research indicates that you will most likely earn a Total score within about 30 points of a score reflecting your true ability. Your Verbal and Quantitative scores are probably within 2.9 points of your true scores. If you take the GMAT exam more than once, you probably will not receive exactly the same scores. "Reliability" indicates the degree to which you would keep the same score if you were to take the test more than once (perfect reliability is 1.00). The average reliability of the GMAT Total score is 0.93. Average reliability is 0.87 for the Verbal score and 0.90 for the Quantitative score. Therefore, the reliability of GMAT scores is very high.

How long are my GMAT scores valid?

Scores are usually reported up to five years from the date you took the exam. With a special request and for an additional fee, you may report scores up to 10 years from the date you took the exam. However, scores more than five years old will be accompanied by a statement indicating that they must be interpreted with care; many institutions will not accept scores over five years old. On behalf of GMAC, Pearson VUE destroys all score records more than 10 years old.

How should my scores be used?

Admissions committees typically use GMAT scores in conjunction with your academic record(s) and other information obtained from application materials. Unlike academic grades--which vary in meaning according to the grading standards of each school--GMAT scores are based on the same standard for all test takers and can be compared across all GMAT test administrations.

It is appropriate for GMAT scores to be used as an admissions tool for graduate study in management or as a basis for selecting applicants for financial aid based on academic potential. GMAT scores should not be used as a requirement for awarding a job; as a requirement for employment, job licensing or certification, or job-related rewards such as raises or promotions; or as an achievement test.

How do I send my scores to schools?

Approximately 20 days after your test date, your Official Score Report, including the digital photograph you provided at the test center and copies of your essays, are made available to any graduate management program you designated when you took the GMAT exam. Not all graduate management programs elect to receive photographs and essays. Once scores are made available, a school you designate can access your scores at any time. If you have not yet designated schools to receive your scores, or if you want to designate additional schools, visit www.mba.com or call GMAT Customer Service. We will report results from all tests you took in the last five years.

Who has access to my scores?

Score reports, which include copies of essays and a digital photograph if a designated graduate management program has elected to receive them, are released only at your specific request--either when you take the test, or when you request an Additional Score Report (ASR)--unless required by law, to cooperate in judicial or governmental proceedings, as necessary to detect or prevent unlawful activity, or as otherwise provided in the Privacy Policy on www.mba.com/privacy and in the GMAT Handbook.

Should I decide where to apply based on my scores?

You may be doing yourself a disservice if you rely solely on your GMAT scores to decide where to apply, or even whether to apply at all. Schools treat GMAT scores as only one of several predictors of performance. Most schools publish average and mid-80% range scores for the students they admit. Averages can be skewed by unusually high scores. For that reason, you can generally get a better understanding of the types of GMAT scores a school typically admits by looking at the mid-80% range, which indicates the scores earned by 80% of students who were admitted.

How will retaking the GMAT exam affect my chances of admission?

Admissions committees treat multiple scores in a variety of ways. They may use only your highest scores, your most recent scores, or an average of your scores. You should contact schools directly to learn how they use multiple GMAT scores.

Can I now cancel my scores?

You can cancel your scores only at the test center immediately after you take the test. Once your scores have been reported, they become part of your permanent score record and cannot be canceled.

Management Aptitude Test and Test Scores

- 1 The Management Aptitude Test (MAT) is designed to measure the aptitude of a candidate for pursuing management education and should be used only for this purpose.
- 2 MAT is administered in five sections-Language Comprehension, Mathematical Skills, Data Analysis & Sufficiency, Intelligence & Critical Reasoning and Indian & Global Environment-each section testing a different ability relevant for management education.
- 3 All MAT administrations necessarily have different questions. Thus one administration may be slightly more difficult or less difficult than another. Scaling has been used to take care of these differences.
- 4 The scaled scores reported are standardised scores for respective sections. These scores are reported on a scale of 0 to 100. Extreme scores (below 15 or above 85) are rare.
- 5 The percentile below column indicates the percentage of candidates in the test who scored below that of the candidate in the section.
- 6 The Composite score is an overall scaled score based on the first four sections of MAT. This is reported on a scale of 199 to 801.
- 7 The percentile below for the Composite Score represents the percentage of candidates whose composite scores are below the candidate's. The composite score has a validity period of one year.
- 8 All scores and percentile below figures are reported after rounding off to the nearest whole number.
- 9 Personal data is as reported by the candidate.

Overall Band Score

Overall		7.5	Good User	The test taker has operational command of the language, though with occasional inaccuracies, inappropriate usage and misunderstandings in some situations. They generally handle complex language well and understand detailed reasoning.
Test	Score	Your result explained
Listening	8.0	Test takers at Band 8 can typically follow extended speech involving complex and detailed argumentation. They can identify and process language and grammar automatically, and so are able to concentrate on the development of the overall meaning of what is said by a speaker or speakers. They can understand a wide range of vocabulary, including idiomatic language and fixed phrases or unusual collocations, as well as technical and academic language.
Reading	6.5	Test takers at Band 6.5 can typically deal with a range of factual and opinion-based texts that may be relatively complex and dense with information. They are good at using their vocabulary knowledge to create meaning, both within and across sentences, on a range of general topics and some specialised ones. They can understand implied meanings, and have some ability to understand somewhat complex opinions and arguments. They can generally use reading strategies such as skimming and scanning, and can generally synthesize information and draw inferences.
Speaking	8.0	Test takers at this band can typically speak fluently and at a natural speed, with only occasional repetition or self-correction. Hesitation is usually to find ideas, and not to find words or grammar. Speaking is well-organised, ideas are clear and well linked, and topics are well developed. They use a wide range of natural, accurate and idiomatic vocabulary to discuss all topics, although with occasional errors in word choice, and can paraphrase well if needed. They can use a wide range of grammar structures. Most sentences are accurate, with only occasional errors. Pronunciation is generally
		Advice to improve your score Listen to discussion programmes, especially those on abstract topics you're less familiar with, without pausing or repeating the recording. Try to predict how the conversation might develop, then see if you're correct. Make it a point to notice how the speakers express and qualify their opinions, noting ways they say things that make their arguments particularly effective. Where speakers have different points of view, notice how they respond to one another's comments. Use strategies to infer ideas and meanings that are not directly stated. Afterwards, try to reconstruct the discussion to yourself, to check how much you have understood. Try to read different types of texts, including general and academic texts, and not just in your subject area. In general interest articles, the main point may come in a different place than you expect. In academic texts there will be fewer opinions, or they may be harder to spot. On the other hand, they can be dense with information. Be aware of the differences, and adjust the reading strategies you use depending on the text you're reading. Decide when to read carefully and when to read quickly. In any case, you may want to give yourself a set amount of time, so that even your careful reading is done more quickly and efficiently. Talk to other people about abstract and difficult current issues. Also try giving a talk on those topics, doing this twice, using different vocabulary and grammar structures each time. Ask yourself: Which words and structures worked best? Why? How might I express them even better? Then, try again, talking for longer and more smoothly until you think you have delivered your ideas in the best possible way. Continue to engage with natural English language materials and TV or on the internet. Pay attention to speakers' pronunciation. In particular, note how they use things like intonation and pauses to help

		natural and clear, with only occasional minor problems. They are always easy to understand, and their accent has very little effect on understanding. Test takers at this band can typically address all parts of the question, some more fully than others. (AC) They can give an overview. (GT) The letter has a generally clear purpose; the tone is sometimes not consistent. Key features and bullet points are covered. The point of view and main ideas are relevant but the conclusion(s) may be unclear. Some details might be irrelevant or wrong. Test takers can arrange their ideas logically, so that the writing has a clear progression from start to finish. They are able to use some linking words well, but others with mistakes. They can paragraph their Task 2 writing, although not always logically. They have enough vocabulary to answer the question. They try to use some less common words. They make some spelling mistakes, but the reader can still understand. They can write a mix of simple and complex sentences. The grammar and punctuation mistakes do not usually cause difficulty for the reader.	convey what they are trying to say. Then, think of how you might incorporate those in your own speaking. Practice writing to give information and make arguments. Make sure you cover all the points that need to be covered, providing supporting ideas and details. Reread your work and see if you can make your points clearer. Is the ordering of your ideas logical? Sometimes, rearranging them can make things clearer. You can also try joining up or separating sentences, using the right connecting devices, and changing where you divide your paragraphs. Continue to develop your vocabulary. Words can be similar in meaning but differ in formality, in their tone, and in their implications. Focus on learning the best words to use for the writing task, the situation, and what you want to say. Challenge yourself by producing sentences that are more complex. If you make mistakes with them, don't worry too much; just check and see how you can fix them.
