In a progressive move towards enhancing the employability skills of our students, the Training and Placement Cell, Department of Commerce successfully conducted mock interviews for 3rd and 5th semester students after the successful completion of the aptitude test. The aim was to provide a real-life simulation of job interviews and prepare students for the challenges that lie ahead in their professional journey.

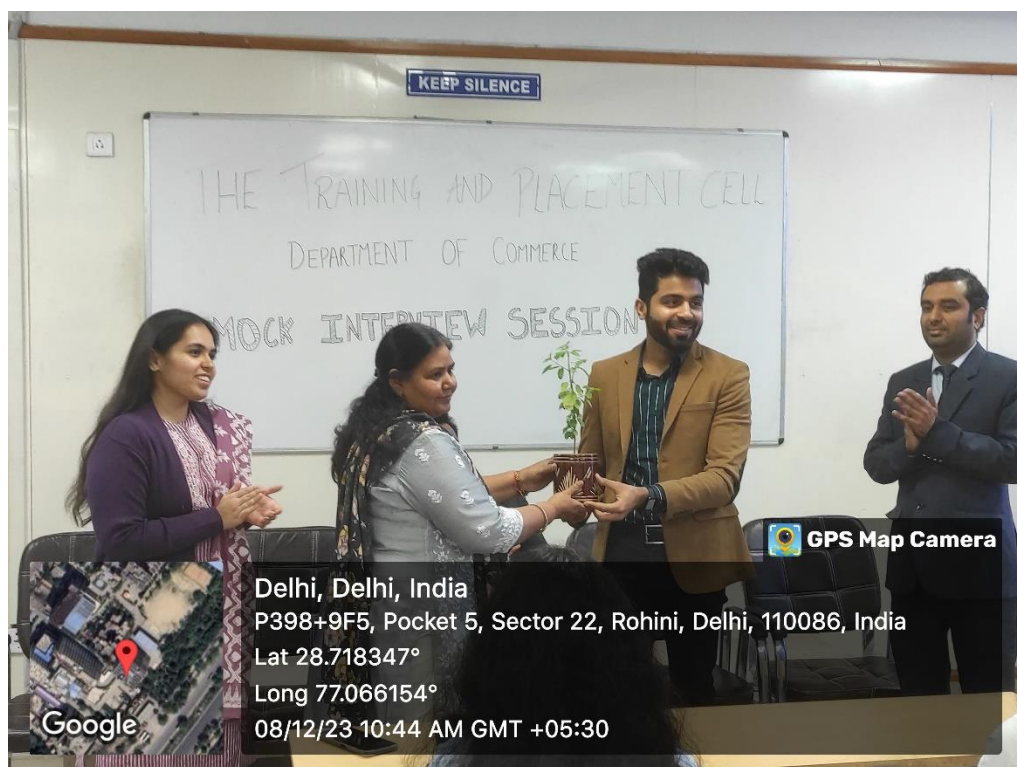

The day commenced with an expression of gratitude to the esteemed guests by Prof. (Dr.) Manju Gupta, Head of Department. The guests for the day, Dhairy Rogha, Talent Acquisition at Stanza Living, and Satyam Srivastava, Team Leader at Emonics Healthcare, were welcomed warmly for their valuable contribution to the event. Their presence added a significant layer of professionalism and expertise to the entire affair.

Dhairya Rogha and Satyam Srivastava, in their insightful addresses, shared words of motivation and wisdom with the students. They not only portrayed themselves as potential employers but also acted as mentors, providing specific advice to each student regarding their resumes and future career goals. This personalized approach added immense value, enabling students to gain clarity and direction in their career pursuits.

What set this event apart was the genuine interest the guests took in the students. Rather than merely conducting interviews, they took the time to understand each student's aspirations, strengths, and areas of improvement. Their feedback was constructive and tailored to the individual, dispelling the anxiety and nervousness that often accompany first-time interviews.

The day concluded with the end of the interviews, leaving both students and faculty with a sense of accomplishment. The success of this event was not just in its seamless organization but in the transformational impact it had on the students. It served as a stepping stone for their future endeavors, equipping them with the confidence and skills necessary to navigate the competitive landscape of job interviews.
